In Review: The Wasatch Boulevard Master Plan Council Member Christine Mikell

We like to say that Cottonwood Heights is the gateway to Big and Little Cottonwood Canyons. Depending on the time of the year, those of us who live in this part of Cottonwood Heights, near Wasatch Boulevard, are either heralding or cursing this truth. The city's reality is that the gateway, Wasatch Boulevard, is not a city road but a State Road, which is managed by the Utah Department of Transportation (UDOT).

Residents and city officials do not have control over what happens along the corridor; we cannot change the speed limit, cannot add acceleration lanes to exit neighborhoods more quickly, or remove the high T-intersection. The only thing that we can do is request that city police patrol the corridor, and influence UDOT to create what we believe the gateway to Big and Little Cottonwood Canyons should look like.

To that end, the city officially kicked off the development of the Wasatch Boulevard Master Plan two years ago, in August 2017. A master plan serves as a long-range planning document that establishes a clear direction and vision of the future. Over time, it is used to guide current and future city leadership in making decisions, setting policies, allocating budget and requesting funding. It includes goals, objectives and recommendations for various areas of interest, including land use and development, transportation, recreation and more. A master plan, once adopted, remains a living document guided by public input. An area master plan does not initiate construction, approve development, or create a binding ordinance.

The Wasatch Boulevard Master Plan was approved unanimously by the City Council on July 2. Many meetings and discussions happened over the past two years. An initial open house was held in November 2017 to receive input from the general public on the area and to receive feedback for the proposed goals of the plan. More than 100 residents attended the open house or completed an online survey to provide this feedback. A second open house was held in March 2018 to share plan recommendations and potential scenarios designed around the project goals. Once again, members of the public gave their feedback to the proposed developments. This public input was directly incorporated into the plan and was influential in the development of the final goals, recommendations and preferred scenario. In early 2018, a project webpage was established for the city to provide public access to the draft master plan.

The Cottonwood Heights Planning Commission held three formal public hearings from July to September 2018. This culminated in the Commission's unanimous recommendation of approval to the City Council.

The City Council took its first official public comments on the plan in September 2018. While the plan was originally scheduled for final action in October, the Council decided on multiple occasions to reschedule the vote in order to review additional input from the Council and incorporate any relevant public input from UDOT's EIS open houses.

The plan establishes many goals that it seeks to accomplish. Some are as follows:

- Preserve and enhance the character and livability of existing residential neighborhoods;
- Increase travel choices along the Wasatch corridor;
- Enhance opportunities for recreation along the corridor;
- Preserve and enhance scenic and natural qualities along the corridor;
- Promote and prioritize sustainable solutions to Wasatch Canyon, with access at a local and regional scale.

The final recommendations of this plan seek to balance each of these goals in a beneficial way. The following are examples of a few of the varied recommendations made in the plan:

1. Establish a shared-use pedestrian pathway separate from the road along the Wasatch Boulevard Corridor;
2. Preserve key views along the corridor, and emphasize the natural foothill landscape;
3. In partnership with UDOT, consider any capacity increases to the corridor sensitively, and minimize the pavement width of the roadway as much as possible;

4. Encourage speed reduction and road design that promote the natural character of the corridor and safe access to and from residential neighborhoods;
5. Encourage a public transit center near the mouth of Big Cottonwood Canyon, and promote the design of Wasatch Boulevard with public transit as a priority;
6. Improve communication about canyon capacity and parking conditions;

Recommendations relevant to the roadway cannot be directly implemented by the city but will represent the city's local vision for the corridor and can and will be used to provide important local input to UDOT. Formal adoption of this plan strengthened the city's working partnership with UDOT and provides more opportunity for implementation of these recommendations than would otherwise exist without a plan in place.

Based on public feedback and the approval of this plan, on July 2, UDOT agreed that Wasatch Boulevard is a unique gateway corridor and merits a corridor-specific approach to the future design and function of the road. To many of us who have met with UDOT over the last couple of years, this was refreshing to hear. ■

Community Service Opportunity - Salt Lake County Community & Economic Development Advisory Council

Salt Lake County has a Community & Economic Development Advisory Council comprised of residents and volunteers from various cities throughout the county. The Council's purpose is to review, score, and rank all applications submitted for the use of CDBG (Community Development Block Grant) funding. There is currently no Cottonwood Heights resident on the Committee, and we are hoping to change that. Participation on this Council is beneficial for an important county-wide program and is a great opportunity for a resident to serve. The Council is a temporary commitment, and holds weekly meetings January to April. If you are interested in learning more about this service opportunity or applying to serve on the Council, please contact Mike Johnson, Community & Economic Development Director, at 801-944-7060 or at mjohnson@ch.utah.gov. ■

Safety Tips for Online Dating

By CHPD Chief Robby Russo

I met my wife at work when I was 19 years old, and even back then, she knew a lot about me before we ever dated. Social Media has changed our world and made meeting people easier and more complex than ever before. My kids had to explain Tinder, Match and Snapchat, and now I pay tuition on something called Venmo.

In recent years, we have seen through media reports the results of online dating gone horribly wrong. Often these cases involve young women (this happens to men, too) who become victims of individuals with malicious intent surfing and catfishing on the web. However, despite the risks, online dating is now widely accepted and in some groups, it's the norm. These online relationships can either end up in a love connection or with the two individuals going their separate ways. A challenge with online dating is that personal safety sometimes gets overlooked.

It's easy to let your guard down or find yourself in an unsafe situation, and that is why it's important to have a few common-sense strategies that keep you safe. Here are a few tips to keep in mind as you pursue dating online:

1. Tell your friends where you're going and when you'll be home and have a safety code system in place if you need to get out of there (if you're either uncomfortable or feel like you're in danger, basically anything that might warrant needing to leave). A text code to a friend can trigger an 'emergency' and rescue call.
2. Create a routine with a buddy that includes checking in by phone if the date goes to another location, when it wraps up and when you're safely home. Share your "Find Friend" location with a close friend. Never accept a ride from someone new; either drive yourself or find alternative transportation such as Uber or Lyft.
3. Consider making the first date alcohol free. If you do drink, don't accept a drink purchased for you before you arrive. If you didn't see the drink arrive, order something else. Also limit drinking, as most reported incidents of rape cases involve intoxication.
4. Do some research on your own before the date. You will be surprised at what you can learn about a potential date floating around on social media including photos, arrest records, lawsuits, bankruptcies, child support debt, their inner social circle and work history.

Talk before your first date and trust your gut. Meet in public places and avoid secluded areas such as hiking or private walking trails. If possible, sneak a picture of them and their license plate in case it is needed later. It may seem that these suggestions stifle the romance, but first dates can be scary — not only are you putting yourself out there emotionally but also because meeting a stranger online is full of risk. If something unfortunate does happen with a stranger met online, please call the police and we will respond immediately.

We believe you, and we don't blame the victim. ■

Is Your Child Ready for School?

When does school start? Where does my child meet the bus? What's on the lunch menu? Parents can stay in the know by frequently checking canyonsdistrict.org. In addition, here are a few key dates and pieces of information:

- Aug. 1 – Online Registration Opens
- Aug. 16 – Sixth-grade orientation
- Aug. 19 – First Day of School
- Aug. 22 – First Day of Kindergarten
- Sept. 2 – Labor Day

Register for school: Starting Aug. 1, CSD families can register their children for school online. Have vacation plans for Aug. 1? Don't fret — just complete the process when you return. Because online registration is not first-come, first-served, you won't need to worry about being the first to log in and register your child. Also, the time you register will not impact teacher or course selection for your child. You may still register in person if you prefer. A list of walk-in registration dates can be found at canyonsdistrict.org.

Sign up to volunteer: Over the past 10 years, more than 126,000 parents and patrons have devoted about 1.6 million hours to volunteering in Canyons District schools. Applications for the 2019-2020 school year are now being accepted at canyonsdistrict.org. ■

CSD Launches Online Alumni Database

Canyons, the first school district to be created in Utah in 100 years, turned 10 on July 1, 2019, and to commemorate this milestone, the district has launched an online alumni directory to help high school graduates stay connected, communicate and collaborate. The directory is live, and alumni are encouraged to log in to the portal at canyonsdistrict.org and verify the information in their profile. ■

History Question of the Month

Mining activities in Little Cottonwood Canyon began in the mid-1860s; soon smelters were constructed at the mouth of the canyon to process the ore. At least four smelters and one stamp mill were built. Two of these smelters were in the present boundaries of our city. Which ones were they?

The Flagstaff Silver Mining Company Ltd. was incorporated in London, England. It not only operated the Flagstaff Mine in Little Cottonwood Canyon, it also built a smelter at the mouth of the canyon to process the ore from that mine and the Emma Mine. The smelter was built by Buel and Batemen in 1870. It consisted of three furnaces, two of which went into service the first year and the third soon after. The smelter operated between 1870 and 1873. It appears that financial trouble was its downfall.

The second was the Jones and Pardee Smelter. It was built about the same time as the Flagstaff. It consisted of one furnace that could process eight tons of ore a day. It was sold in 1872 to The Wellington Mining and Smelting Company which incorporated in San Francisco in 1872. It was also known as the Little Cottonwood Smelter.

In 1991, mine tailings located in Little Cottonwood Creek resulted into an investigation by the EPA. Contaminated areas where the two smelters had been located, plus two additional sites to the south were identified and tested, and remediation of the areas took place. ■

Keep Recycling

By now you have probably heard that recycling fees have increased and have been higher than landfilling the materials. It's also important to know that landfilling recycling will not reduce costs.

WFWRD continues with the commitment to provide residents the avenues to recycle. The current services of weekly collections will be maintained because it is still worth it for the environment and to lessen future costs of not recycling. Here are a few tips to keep costs as low as possible:

Keep it clean. Make sure recycling items are free from food and fluids. You don't need to wash your recycling, just a quick rinse if needed.

When in doubt, throw it out.

No plastic bags of any kind. Even bagging your recycling and placing the bag in the curbside recycle can drives up costs. ■

Mattress Recycling

Spring Back Mattress, at 1929 S. 4130 West, will take your used mattresses and will recycle 100 percent of its materials!
The recycling fee for mattresses is $10 per piece. They will also come pick up your mattress for an additional $40. This is a much better option than sending it to the landfill for $15 per piece. For more information, please call them at 801-906-8146 or visit www.springbackutah.com. ■

WFWRD Services

WFWRD provides services to the community that no other waste/recycling organization provides.
In addition to its standard curbside waste
and recycling collection,
Wasatch Front Waste
& Recycling District offers subscription curbside green waste
and curbside glass collection. It also has bulk waste and green waste trailers available for rent on a first come-first served basis and landfill vouchers for truck or trailer loads available at city offices. As residents within the WFWRD district, you have access to these and all other services. Visit www.wasatchfrontwaste.org to find out more. ■
